

HELEN T. LEIGH MUSEUM FIELD TRIP GRANT, 2022-2023

The MacArthur Museum of Arkansas Military History offers travel grants to help students visit the museum for interactive programs that enhance the teaching of World War I and II, as well as learn about the historic Arsenal Building and Civil War Arkansas. Educators are welcome to choose from the programs and tours listed on the application or request another topic, which will be considered by museum staff. Educators are also free to request time to tour the building on their own with an introduction from museum staff. The grant offers up to $750 to public schools for field trips to 3rd – 12th grade students in Arkansas.

FIRST CALL: AMERICAN POSTERS OF WORLD WAR I

MacArthur Museum of Arkansas Military History invites students and teachers to experience the exhibit First Call: American Posters of World War I. This colorful exhibit highlights the creation of numerous war posters from the United States. The posters offer a unique perspective of World War I through artists' renditions of frontlines and home-front scenes to spur Americans to support the war effort. Posters for the United War Work Campaign, the American Red Cross, and most notably the Liberty and Victory Loan campaigns were successful in raising funds for the war and promoted an outpouring of public support for the cause.

The educational program examines how propaganda impacted and defined cultural perceptions through the use of primary sources. It includes a historical introduction to wartime propaganda, poster analysis, discussion of film propaganda, and a poster making activity.

THE ART OF WAR

Explaining the emotions, turmoil, and aspects of war from not only the soldier's point of view, but also society's viewpoint to students can be a challenging task. Textbooks tend to generalize the impact of war on a nation's homefront, a soldier's family, a destroyed community, and the enemy. However, artwork can often portray the emotional burdens of war experienced by those who are actively participating.

"The Art of War" program utilizes diverse historical art mediums, such as photography, paintings, cartoons, and sculpture, to creatively explore with students the humanity in war. Through discussion and analysis of wartime photography, art as a memorial, and art made by soldiers and veterans, "The Art of War" program offers students an alternative to secondary source accounts of war and conflict.

CIVIL WAR-LITTLE ROCK ARSENAL CRISIS

The first shots of the Civil War were almost fired at the Little Rock Arsenal. In February, 1861 a group of armed militia sympathetic to the newly formed Confederacy arrived from the southern and eastern part of the state demanding that Captain James Totten of the 2nd U.S. Artillery turn the arsenal over to them so that they could give the weapons to the Confederate States of America. This action caused grave concern to the citizens of Little Rock as well as Governor Henry Rector since Arkansas was a state deeply divided over the question of secession and was still a state belonging to the United States. Only compromise between all parties involved prevented bloodshed and the first shots of the Civil War being fired in the state's capital.

This program explores what led to the Arsenal Crisis and looks at the causes for the state to eventually secede to join the Confederacy. In addition, the program discusses the important battles that occurred in Arkansas during the Civil War and how the state was affected by four years of civil war in our country.

HISTORY DETECTIVE/SCAVENGER HUNT

What is a museum? What can you find there? Why are museums important? How do they use artifacts, or objects from the past, to tell stories? These questions are examined as well as learning the role artifacts and exhibits play in preserving history and fulfilling the museum's mission to honor those whose sacrifice made possible the freedoms we have today. Students will discuss these topics then complete a scavenger hunt inside the museum.
